Eight Americans Killed, 62 Hurt In Viet Nam

87 Die In Plane Crash In Andes

American Woman Among Fatalities

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — A Chilean air liner with 87 persons aboard crashed and exploded into flames 11,700 feet up in the Andes Saturday and a rescue patrol reported there were no survivors.

The patrol reached the scene after a horseback and foot climb of several hours and said the plane of the Chilean air line — LAN — hit 1,200 feet below the summit of La Corona Mountain.

It was Latin America's second worst plane disaster. A Brazilian airliner crashed in Lima, Peru Nov. 27, 1962, killing 97 persons.

Among the 28 foreigners aboard was a U.S. woman, listed as Helen Berger of Long Island, N.Y.

The plane had taken off for Buenos Aires, Argentina and Montevideo, Uruguay, with 79 passengers and a crew of seven. It crashed a few minutes later near La Valdes, about 50 miles east of Santiago.

A police plane flew over the area and spotted the burned out wreckage scattered for about 600 feet down the slope.

Also aboard the plane was a football team from the Chilean National Bank, bound for Montevideo to play the Bank of Montevideo team. Among the foreigners were three Italians, two Germans, a Russian and a Czechoslovakian.

Rescue patrols were dispatched to the crash site. They drove to the foot of the mountain and then began the slow ascent on horseback. It was reported the rocky terrain was so difficult that helicopters could not land.

It is the worst air disaster in Chilean history. The worst previous was a crash in 1960 that killed 24 persons.

In both accidents, the same line was involved. The plane in Saturday's crash was a DC-6. It was due in Buenos Aires about three hours after the take off of 8 a.m. It was then to go on to Montevideo.

A 7-year-old Chilean boy, Luis Orellana Nunez, had his life saved because his papers to Montevideo were not in order. Police would not permit him to board the plane.

There was no indication why the plane crashed barely five minutes after take off among the towering Andean peaks. The area is one of severe air turbulence.

BRITAIN MARKS ANNIVERSARY

LONDON (AP) — Flags flew on public buildings and gun salutes were fired from the ancient Tower of London Saturday to mark the 13th anniversary of accession to the throne of Queen Elizabeth II.

The queen and her husband, Prince Philip, are at present on a state visit to Ethiopia.

Ask King To Meet With Katzenbach Instead Of LBJ

SELMA, Ala. (AP) — Negro right-to-vote demonstrations ceased temporarily in Selma Saturday while Dr. Martin Luther King turned again to the White House for help in the civil rights struggle.

The battle for racial equality in Alabama shifted back for the moment to the state Capitol in Montgomery, where King first achieved fame a decade ago.

After spending nearly five days in jail in this segregated town, the 1964 Nobel Peace Prize winner left Saturday morning for Washington. He had hoped to confer with President Johnson Monday.

King, who was greeted by a visiting delegation of congressmen from other states when he walked from his cell at City Jail Friday, said he wanted to talk with the President about getting new right-to-vote legislation.

From the nation's capital, he plans to fly to Montgomery to spearhead a Negro voter registration march Tuesday through the downtown streets of the one-time Confederate capital. King once led a boycott in Montgomery of segregated city buses.

It was during that year-long protest against racial barriers that the young Baptist minister became known around the world as a symbol of the Negro's demands for equal rights.

In Selma, the voter registration campaign paused only for the weekend. King's associates said the day by day street marches will start again this week and continue until the County Board of Registrars meets again Feb. 15.

The Bipartisan group of 15 congressmen who came here at King's request left Friday night after an eight-hour visit. They promised to seek the passage of new federal laws to make it easier for Negroes to vote in Southern communities where state laws hold them back.

The visiting House members talked for three hours with four Alabama Republican congressmen and city and county officials. They also took statements from Negroes who complained of discrimination and of brutality in jail.

The Alabama Republicans challenged the propriety of what they called a self-appointed delegation of outside congressmen coming here without the official status of their regular House committee.

The complaining Negro residents of Dallas County got the promise of some help in a newly issued federal court order which directed state officials to make it easier for them to vote and also to step up the pace of registration.

CARLISLE, England — (AP) — Thieves stole a quarter of a mile of signal and telephone cable south of Carlisle Saturday and stopped west coast trains between England and Scotland. On a seven-mile stretch, all signals were blacked out.

Pilotmen were called to operate trains at cautious speed and there were delays of more than an hour.

Dawson Returning To Red Village In Search For Missing Brother

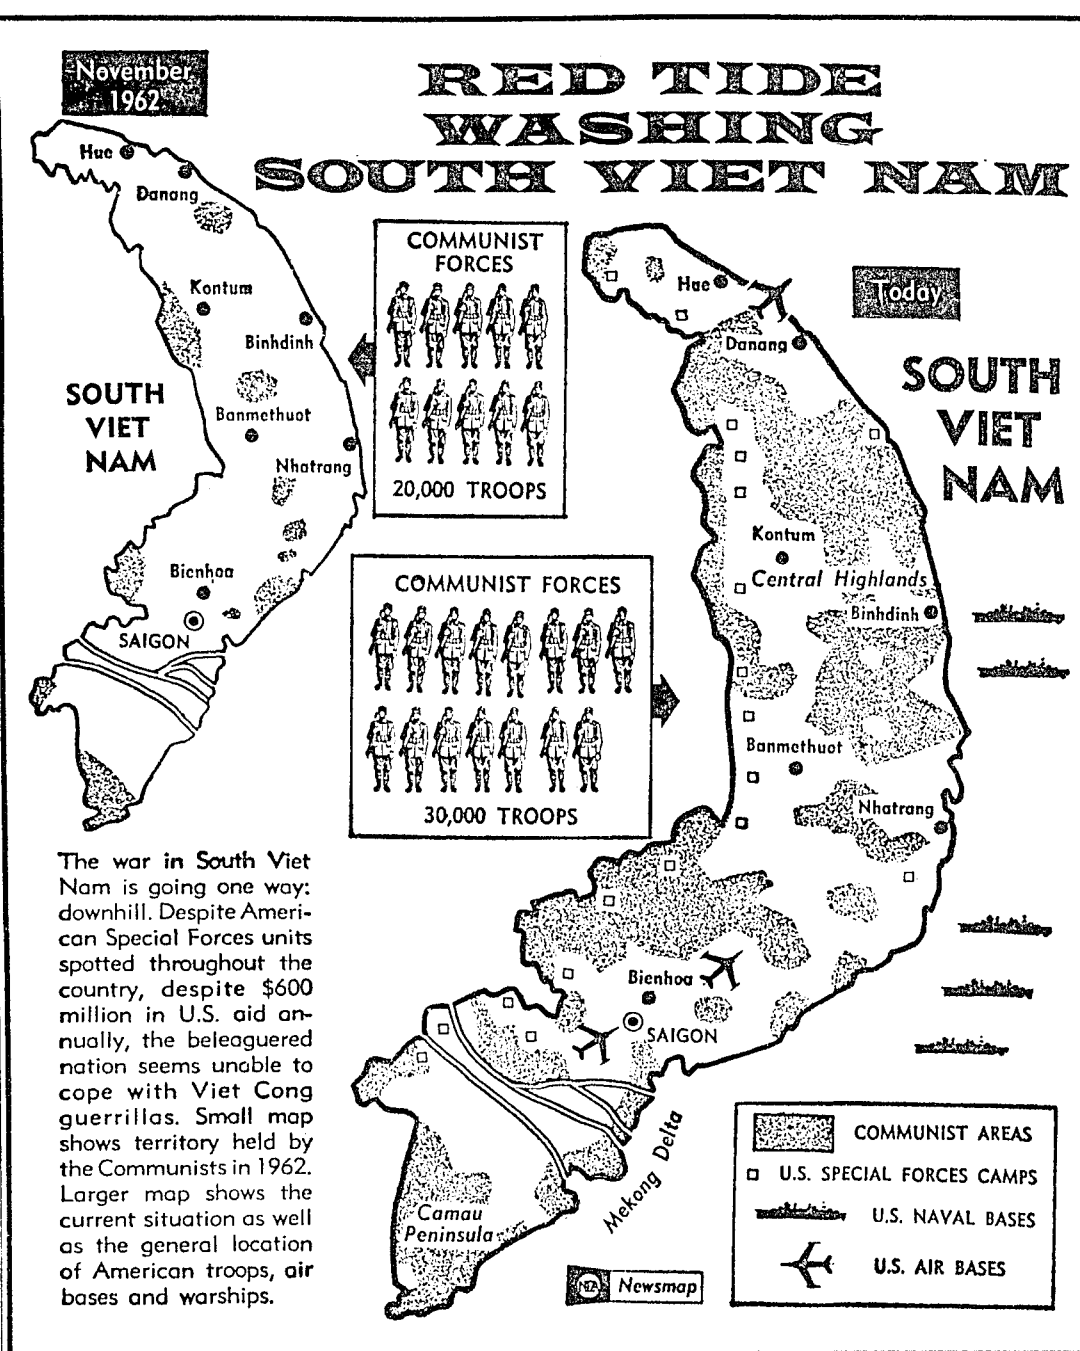

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — "I'm going back in and staying this time," Donald C. Dawson said Saturday.

Going back in means returning to a little Roman Catholic village deep in Communist territory north of Bien Hoa where he is trying to persuade the Viet Cong to return his flier brother — dead or alive.

Lt. Daniel Dawson, 27, vanished Nov. 6 in a spotter plane on a routine reconnaissance mission. Donald, 24, a Californian, arrived a month ago to look for him.

Dawson thinks his brother is dead and he is going back to the guerrillas with the hope the guerrillas will accept his offer of $1,300 for the body.

Recently, there has been an increase of military activity around the village. Dawson said he is worried because this les-

Kosygin In N. Viet Nam

Aim Of Visit Is To Strengthen Unity Against 'U.S. Imperialism'

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Pham Van Dong of North Viet Nam appealed to the Soviet Union and China on Saturday to settle their differences and fight together against the United States.

Speaking at a dinner in Hanoi for visiting Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, the head of the North Vietnamese government said a solution of the Soviet-China dispute was among "the most important international talks."

Replying, Kosygin repeated Soviet pledges of "solidarity with the population of North Viet Nam in its just and heroic struggle against American imperialism."

As for Dong's plea to settle the feud with China so the two Communist giants could fight against the United States, Kosygin only said the Soviet Union "will do everything possible for the strengthening of friendship between socialist states."

Dong claimed, "The American imperialists are trying hard to implement plans of undermining and splitting the Socialist camp and the international Communist movement."

The Vietnamese leader made his plea at a dinner the night Kosygin arrived from a Peking stopover where he had secret — but seemingly not too cordial — talks with Communist Chinese Premier Chou En-lai.

Dong's violently anti-American speech was distributed here by Tass apparently without censorship.

In it, he also demanded that the United States withdraw all troops and weapons from South Viet Nam and permit the whole of Viet Nam to be unified on the basis of the programs of the Communist fronts in both North and South.

Tass reported that Kosygin voiced strong support for unification of the country under Hanoi's leadership when he arrived Saturday morning. He also denounced "American and foreign interventionists and their puppets."

The Communist Vietnamese news agency said 100,000 persons turned out at Gia Lam Airport in Hanoi in welcome to the Russians.

Premier Pham Van Dong welcomed Kosygin and his party, saying the visit would help "the cause of the patriotic struggle of the South Vietnamese people, the cause of the peaceful unification of the homeland of the whole Vietnamese people."

"This visit is sure to strengthen still more the fraternal friendship between the people of our two countries and fraternal solidarity among the Socialist (Communist) nations on the basis of the lofty principles of Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism," the premier said.

Kosygin and his delegation called later on Ho Chi Minh, president of North Viet Nam. Tass said the meeting "was held in a warm and friendly atmosphere." (Continued On Page Seven)

Cong Attack 2 U.S. Compounds, Destroy Plane, 6 Helicopters

SAIGON, Viet Nam (AP) — Eight Americans were killed and at least 62 wounded Saturday night when Viet Cong forces launched coordinated onslaughts on two big U.S. compounds at Pleiku, 340 miles north of Saigon.

At least seven parked aircraft were destroyed. U.S. officials said the heaviest of the two attacks, backed up by mortar fire, was at Camp Holloway, on a Pleiku airport detachment.

Seven Americans were killed at Camp Holloway and 48 wounded.

One U.S. Army transport plane and six helicopters were destroyed. Three other planes and 11 helicopters were damaged. The onslaught, in which the largest number of American casualties in South Viet Nam fell at one time, coincided with the arrival in Hanoi, North Viet Nam, of Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin.

The Viet Cong apparently followed up the mortar barrage on the airport detachment with an infantry attack.

It was not immediately known whether they penetrated the airport compound.

A coordinated attack was mounted at the same time against the U.S. advisory detachment at 2nd Army Corps headquarters in the town of Pleiku.

One American was killed and 13 wounded at the Army corps headquarters.

The attack on the headquarters involved a heavy barrage of 57 millimeter recoilless cannon fire and rifle grenades fired at short range.

The two-pronged attack was by far the worst directed against U.S. forces during this war.

Pleiku is a sprawling town of about 100,000 in the center of a vast plain. The main American detachment just outside the town commands an open view of several miles in almost all directions.

Despite this, the Viet Cong apparently got within striking distance of the camp without tipping its hand.

Close to 1,000 Americans are stationed with the two big detachments. The largest is the headquarters compound for American advisors serving with the 2nd Corps and its dependent units. The other compound, near Pleiku airport, is an aviation detachment for U.S. Army helicopter men and Air Force pilots.

This was the first major Viet Cong initiative since the lunar new year holiday, for which the Viet Cong announced a unilateral cease-fire ending Friday night. ### Senators Wary Or Silent About Viet Nam Dilemma

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senior senators looking into the situation in South Viet Nam are wary or silent about prescriptions for solving the U.S. dilemma there.

In the face of an uncertain picture, politically and militarily, in the U.S.-backed war on Communist guerrillas, the Democratic chairman and ranking Republicans of two key Senate committees bided their time in silence Saturday.

An Associated Press sampling of sentiment among members of the Foreign Relations and Armed Services committees brought expressions of concern from two Republicans about government stability in South Viet Nam.

Other senators — their positions already on record — stuck to their guns in calling for a continued U.S. effort, with stiff action if necessary, to help South Viet Nam win the guerrilla battle.

And Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, spoke again for a negotiated end to the fighting and neutralization of the area.

The Senate Foreign Relations and Armed Services committees both are conducting inquiries. Their chairmen, Sens. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., and Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., and top Republicans, Bourke Hickenlooper of Iowa and Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts, offered no comments on the situation.

Saltonstall said it would be foolish to discuss a course before learning the results of the latest administration mission to South Viet Nam, by presidential adviser McGeorge Bundy.

President Johnson has declared that while senators of both parties are entitled to their differing views, his administration remains committed to the U.S. effort to help South Viet Nam fight off the Viet Cong.

Sen. George D. Aiken, R-Vt., of the Foreign Relations Committee said government stability in Viet Nam is his key concern. "If I could be assured what the Viet Nam government would be a month from now, I'd feel better qualified to answer," he said.

Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, R-Maine, a member of the Armed Services Committee, said stabilized government should be a key concern.

Sen. Frank Carlson, R-Kan., suggested new measures to improve the military picture. "I am in favor of sealing off the movement of troops and material from North Viet Nam to South Viet Nam by posting border guards," he said.

Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., who had called previously for U.S. disengagement, spelled out his stand in favor of a negotiated settlement Tuesday.

Ousted Huong Takes Refuge With British

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Former Premier Tran Van Huong, saying his life may be in danger, has taken refuge in the British Embassy residence. The action may complicate the political situation in South Viet Nam even more.

The development came to light as McGeorge Bundy, President Johnson's special envoy, entered his third day of talks here with U.S. and Vietnamese officials and leaders of South Viet Nam's religious faiths.

Huong, first civilian premier since the overthrow of President Ngo Dinh Diem's regime in 1963, was thrown out of office Jan. 27 in a coup led by army strong man Lt. Gen Nguyen (Continued On Page Seven)

Rains Hit Gulf Areas, Montana May Get Blizzard

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Heavy rains lashed the Gulf region east of the Mississippi River on Saturday as a fresh surge of arctic and gusty winds moved into Montana.

Brookley Air Force Base in Mobile, Ala., was doused with 3 1/2 inches of rain Saturday and Tallahassee, Fla., measured more than 1 1/2 inches in six hours.

The Weather Bureau warned that the new push of arctic air into northern Montana, combined with snow, would result in blizzard conditions. Warnings went out to travelers and stockmen in parts of Montana east of the Continental Divide.

Heavy snow warnings were up for eastern Nevada through parts of Utah into the mountains of northern Arizona. Ely, Nev., measured five inches of snow in six hours. Eight inches fell on some of the mountains in northern Arizona.

Scattered showers dotted the Southwest and pushed into the coastal sections of Southern California. A few showers sprinkled the Pacific Northwest, while snow fell in the northern Rockies.

Scorn Greets Briton's Advice On Girl's Legs

NEW YORK (AP) — No doubt the bachelor professor from England was only trying to be helpful when he warned women of the danger of exposing bare limbs to the elements. But his advice was received with undiluted scorn on this side of the Atlantic.

Prof. Alexander Boyd, 59, head of Manchester University's department of surgery, speaking at a news conference Thursday, advised women to wear thick stockings, boots, even bloomers—anything to keep their legs warm.

"Girls who dress scantily in cold weather," said Boyd, "run the risk of getting fat calves and blotchy skins by the time they're 30." The result of exposure to cold is a condition called erythrocytosis crurum puerilum frigidum.

"Hideous legs," he concluded, "can ruin a girl's life. The only answer is to keep them warm." The professor's theory and advice left Americans, from designer Rudi Gernreich to actress Jill St. John, almost unanimously unimpressed.

Miss St. John said she had no intention of wearing thick stockings or heavy bloomers.

"If he's a bachelor," she said, "I'm sure he's going to stay that way. The whole world doesn't live in Goose Bay, Labrador, or Thule, Greenland. I think the doctor would be doing more of a service if he devoted his search elsewhere—like finding a cure for the common cold."

"The professor is all wet," said Miss Carol Nashe, who is head of Boston's Carol Nashe Fashion Model Agency, one of the largest in New England. "He's been a bachelor too long. I deal with lovely girls practically all of whom are natives of New England, which has extreme cold weather in the winter. None wears heavy bloomers or thick stockings or even galoshes—and you should see their legs. They're perfectly curvaceous and lovely."

"Wear bloomers and heavy stockings? Not on your life," Gernreich, designer of the topless swimsuit and no bra, refrained from criticizing the Boyd ideas only because they don't conflict with current styles.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market's 1965 drive to historic peaks stalled last week but momentum was such that there was no general selling.

In fact, by the middle of the week, popular market averages stood at record peaks. The retreat from these peaks was stubborn and amounted to little.

Corporate news of earnings, dividends, stock splits and the like continued most encouraging but the prices of stocks had discounted much of this in the four weeks of steady advance which preceded the past week.

Stock trading had entered a new month, February, which has a statistical record of producing a few more declines than advances among the industrial and rail averages.

At the same time, there was further concern about the monetary situation, underlined by a loss of $100 million in U.S. gold holdings. French President Charles de Gaulle's proposals for a world monetary system more closely linked to gold rather than the dollar and the pound sterling, and also some worry in financial circles about possible credit tightening moves by the federal reserve.

The most noticeable effect on the stock market was a rally by gold mining issues, most of which had sunk considerably below this year's highs reached before Wall Street became convinced that there would be no change in the $35-per-ounce price for gold.

The Dow Jones industrial average reached a historic closing high of 906.30 on Wednesday but closed the week at 901.57, posting a small net loss of 1.29.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks reached its latest record peak of 537.6 on Thursday but ended the week unchanged at 537.2.

The market performance was highlighted by the fact that 763 stocks rose and 615 fell among 1,331 issues traded this week on the New York Stock Exchange.

Friday was the first of 11 straight trading sessions in which more issues declined than advanced.

Bond prices dropped amid investor uneasiness about international finance.

U.S. Treasury bond prices skidded sharply. Of the 41 issues, 40 registered price declines.

On the New York Stock Exchange, bond volume for the week totaled a par value of $45.37 million compared to the previous week's $47.438 million.

Of 481 issues traded during the week, 197 advanced in price, 184 declined and 100 were unchanged. New high prices were set by 45 and new lows were set by five.

Ousted Huong Takes Refuge With British

Khanh, Huong had been opposed by the Buddhists.

He entered the British residence Wednesday.

"As far as I know he is still there," a British spokesman said. "I understand that no formal request has been yet made for asylum."

Informants said British Ambassador R. G. A. Etherington-Smith, who came under Buddhist fire in December for publicly praising Huong, granted him refuge after the former leader told him:

"I think I may be in personal danger."

Since Huong's downfall, leaflets have been scattered around Saigon calling for his return to power. Huong is not believed to have had any tie-up with the authors of the leaflets. Some officials believe groups opposed to the military leadership of Khanh may be behind the leaflets.

Huong, 61, became premier in late October after Khanh, under student and political pressure, stepped down. A former schoolteacher, Huong had served two terms as mayor of Saigon.

As premier he was uncompromising and showed no public fear. Thrown out of office by Khanh, Huong dropped from public view. He retired to his modest home near Saigon's central police station.

The fact that he has taken refuge in a foreign embassy, once more thrust him into the political limelight and this could mean trouble for Khanh, who has named Nguyen Xuan Canh, a civilian, as acting premier.

After meeting with religious leaders, Bundy told newsmen he could not say whether the situation in South Viet Nam was optimistic or pessimistic.

1,000 Man-Made Objects Orbit Since Oct. 4, 1956

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 1,000 man-made objects — satellites, spacecraft, capsules and assorted bits and pieces thereof — have been placed in orbit since the space age dawned Oct. 4, 1957.

Tabulations prepared by the Goddard Space Flight Center at nearby Greenbelt, Md., show that 243 of these objects were satellites launched by the United States or its friendly partners, and 94 were Soviet-launched satellites.

Of that total, 103 U.S.-sponsored satellites are still in orbit, along with 16 made in Russia. The record lists as "decayed" satellites — those no longer in orbit — 140 of United States and 73 of Soviet origin.

Many of the satellites separated after launch into two or more space objects, or broke apart accidentally or by design, to produce space junk. The worst offender on this score was the vehicle which on June 29, 1961, produced the transit 4A navigation satellite, the Injun satellite, and 204 pieces of metal.

All are still in orbit.

The next most prolific source of space debris was a Soviet launch of Oct. 24, 1962, which produced 24 orbiting objects. The last of these dropped out of the sky in late February 1963.

Goddard's records identify 460 hunks of junk of U. S. origin, and 182 of the Russian variety, as having orbited the earth at one time or another. Of these, 372 U. S. pieces and 16 Soviet items are still in orbit.

The compilation does not take into account some 400 million hair-thin dipoles or wires, called Project West Ford space needles, launched by the United States in May 1962, and presumably orbiting in a continuous band, some five miles wide and 25 miles thick, encircling the earth.

Also still in orbit, but around the sun rather than the earth, mosphere." A meeting with Pham "passed in an atmosphere of cordiality and friendship," Tass added.

On Kossygin's arrival, the North Vietnamese Communist newspaper Nhan Dan indicated a distinct movement away from adherence to Red China's militant policy. Divorcing North Viet Nam from Red China is believed to be a prime object of Kossygin's visit.

Expressing support for Soviet foreign policy, Nhan Dan cited a speech by Leonid I. Brezhnev, first secretary of the Soviet Communist party, on Nov. 6 extolling peaceful coexistence.

Premier Chou En-lai of Red China was present for that speech in the Kremlin and noticeably refrained from joining in the applause for coexistence, which is denounced by Peking as a sellout to capitalism.

Kossygin flew to Hanoi from Peking, where he had stayed Friday and talked with Chou. Brief official announcements indicated these talks were hardly cordial; no phrases such as "warm and friendly" or "cordiality and friendship" being used.

TWO BOYS DRESSED AS WOMEN ARRESTED AFTER ROBBERY

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Two 17-year-old boys dressed in women's clothing were arrested by suburban Kirkwood police Saturday after a jewelry shop robbery.

Officers arrested Thomas L. Morrow and John L. Clay, both from St. Louis. Police said they fired several shots in a two-block chase after the two following the hold-up of the Matt Worker jewelry shop.

Worker told police the youths entered his store armed with a revolver and a shotgun. Worker refused when they asked for money and police said Worker told them one of the youths struck him.

Then, officers said Worker was forced to open a safe. The bandits took about $350 cash, and a wrist watch, and fled on foot. Worker screamed that he had been robbed. An officer heard the cries.

Police said they caught the two after a short chase on foot. There was no resistance. Officers said Morrow and Clay were wearing women's black wigs, lipstick, scarfs, leotards, and women's black coats.

Officers said the two orally admitted the robbery. The money and wrist watch were recovered.

Castro Says Two More Guerrillas Are Captured

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The Cuban government announced Saturday night that it had captured two more anti-Castro guerrillas who tried to infiltrate with a load of radio equipment and weapons.

The men were stopped Friday night at San Luis on the western coast, according to a communique broadcast by the Cuban Radio. They said they had come from a base of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency on the Nicaraguan coast and were to be picked up later by fellow commandos.

No names were given. Last month the Cuban government arrested the anti-Castro leader Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo and three of his top aides shortly after they landed in Cuba.

U.S. Puzzled By Contradictory Kremlin Actions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department announced Saturday that the Russians have agreed to cut back their king crab fishing off Alaska. But U.S. sources expect Moscow may offer North Viet Nam more aid, perhaps including jet fighters.

The seemingly contradictory actions of the Kremlin in cooperating with the United States in some areas while denouncing America elsewhere and helping its opponents, has presented U.S. strategists with a puzzle on where Soviet policy is heading.

One theory now held in Washington is that the new Soviet leadership has not yet decided what foreign policy course to pursue in the long run. Thus for the time being the Kremlin seems to be laying out lines in all directions to take advantage of whatever opportunity might subsequently arise.

The U.S.-Soviet agreement on king crab fishing, a subject of repeated irritation to American fishermen in the Alaska area, was pleasing to U.S. officials although they declined to attribute any special political significance to the accord.

It followed by a week a U.S.-Soviet agreement on stepping up cultural exchanges. Also, the Russians freed an American student who had been jailed on an auto accident manslaughter charge in Moscow.

The Russians agreed to reduce by some 21 per cent during the coming two years their catch of king crab along the U.S. continental shelf under the eastern Bering Sea.

These and other acts by the Russians have led U.S. analysts to believe that the Soviet Union still is interested in former Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev's peaceful coexistence policy of strengthening links with the West — when this serves their interest.

On Viet Nam, it is suggested here that the Hanoi visit by Premier Alexei N. Kossygin is aimed at strengthening Moscow's influence should the United States pull out or the Communists get the upper hand through a negotiated settlement.

For this reason, U.S. officials expect Kossygin will offer North Viet Nam a considerable step-up in Soviet economic and military aid. The Soviet arms assistance probably would not involve sending many Russians to North Viet Nam, it was said.

Create Council On Equal Rights Opportunities

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson created Saturday a President's Council on Equal Opportunity to coordinate the activities of federal agencies in the civil rights field.

Johnson named Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey as chairman of the council, which was set up in response to a recommendation from Humphrey.

The vice president, who had been assigned earlier the job of bringing together the many civil rights activities of the federal government, had asked for "a comparatively simple coordinating mechanism, without elaborate staff and organization."

The resulting council will consist of 16 government officials, including six Cabinet officers, besides Humphrey.

Johnson, in an executive order establishing the council, assigned it the duty of recommending to the President programs and policies to help carry out the purposes of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, and other laws relating to racial discrimination.

In a letter to Humphrey telling of his action, Johnson expressed hope the council will prove "a most effective means of insuring cooperation, coordination and harmonious working relationships" among the agencies involved.

"There is no remaining question about the determination of the American people to eliminate the injustice and the waste of human resources that have resulted from discrimination in this country," Johnson said.

BANKER'S ARREST FOR EMBEZZLEMENT SHOCKS RESIDENTS

WINONA, Tex. (AP) — Residents of this little east Texas town expressed shock Saturday after the arrest for embezzlement of Butler McClung, Winona's only banker and the scion of a prominent banking family.

"People around these parts would have trusted him with every dime they had," said truck driver Alton Blalock. "I just don't get it."

McClung, 62, was charged by FBI agents Friday with the embezzlement of $380,392.34 from the Winona State Bank. He was its president, as had been his father.

He was also the only employee and the only person who knew the combination of the vault in the bank, which had a capital stock of $200,000 and deposits of approximately $50,000.

The bank ceased to exist, technically, Friday after the soft-spoken, bespectacled McClung closed its doors at the suggestion of the State Banking Department.

Its assets will be liquidated by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., as soon as the agency makes good accounts up to $10,000. The bank had 250 to 300 depositors.

McClung, freed under $10,000 bond, apparently spent the day in his large white house on a hilltop. He declined to talk to newsmen.

Several townspeople described McClung, a native of Winona, as courteous but businesslike. He preferred to spend

First Half Allows Solons To Upset JHS 79-72

Zurkammer Paces Mac 78-59 Win Over Rolla

By DAVE INGLES

MacMurray led virtually all the way Saturday night and handed Missouri-Rolla a decisive 78-59 loss on the Highlander court.

Forward Tom Zurkammer sparked the Clan effort with 25 points in the win that avenged an 87-81 decision at Rolla earlier in the season.

Spotting the visiting Miners a 4-0 spread in the first two minutes, MacMurray came rolling back and ran up a 21-4 margin with nine minutes played.

Zurkammer and forward Harry Matheny led the Highlander attack, tallying 16 and 8 points respectively in the half, as the Clan sped to a 39-26 edge at intermission.

Early in the second period Rolla rallied as the Highlanders experienced once again the familiar cold spell.

Coming from a 44-30 deficit, the Miners trimmed the margin to 44-37 as Mac went scoreless for over four minutes.

Ralph Farber sparked the Rolla comeback, tallying three buckets on a jump shot and two driving layups.

"Zurk" Adds To Edge With fourteen minutes remaining, Zurkammer stole the ball and broke away for the two-point, giving Mac a ten point spread once again, 47-37.

Following some action from the foul line, the Miners' Louie Piepho hit on a jumper from outside to cut the Highlander lead to six at 50-44, but that was a close as the visitors could get.

A pair of free throws and a corner jump shot by guard Jim Hargrave sent the Clan in front by a 53-44 count with ten minutes remaining, and then Zurkammer canned four straight 7-10 count for the year with the free tosses to give the hosts a 60-47 edge.

Guard Dave Bucher intercepted a Rolla pass and fed to Dennis Beard for the layup as the Mac fieldhouse Tuesday evening. The Highlanders took a 79-68 decision on the IC court in December to retain the coveted Elm City trophy.

Accuracy from the charity stripe kept Mac out of the Miners' reach in the final minutes to insure the victory.

Free Tosses Count In the final ten minutes, the Clan hit on 14 free tosses as the Miners could connect on only 7.

The winners hit for a 403 mark from the floor, with Rolla connecting at a 364 clip. From the charity stripe, Rolla could manage only a 500 mark while Mac skimmed the nets at a 718 pace.

Second in scoring for the Highlanders behind Zurkammer's 25 was Matheny with 15, and Beard added 12. Dick Cairns led the losers with 13.

While Ralph Farber added 15, Mike Huett pitched in 11. The win snapped a four game losing streak for the Clan, now sits remaining, and then Zurkammer canned four straight 7-10 count for the year with the free tosses to give the hosts a 60-47 edge.

Traditional rival Illinois College will be the Clan's next opponent as the Blueboys visit the Mac fieldhouse Tuesday evening. The Highlanders took a 79-68 decision on the IC court in December to retain the coveted Elm City trophy.

Maddox Agrees To Serve Negroes In His Restaurant

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — As his customers and wife wept, restaurant operator Lester Maddox announced Saturday that he would serve Negroes. It would have cost him $200 a day to continue serving white persons only.

Maddox, a bitter opponent of the civil rights law, had fought the act since its passage. Calvin Craig, the Georgia grand dragon of the United Klans of America, promptly dropped in for lunch, but no Negroes sought service.

For Maddox, it was the end of a long struggle to keep his eating place segregated.

"We are not surrendering," he said, "but only accepting that which is being forced upon us — that which we feel violates our oath to God. We shall continue this fight as long as we live."

But he reported an order would be filed in federal court Monday confirming his readiness to comply with the civil rights law.

Less than 24 hours before, a federal judge ordered him to pay a $200 fine for each day his restaurant was open and practiced racial discrimination.

Maddox said he was not surprised at the court's decision but was shocked so many Americans had failed to fight the passage of the Civil Rights Act, which, he added, already had brought hate, prejudice, violence and death.

He asked his friends and supporters not to make unkind remarks about U.S. Dist. Judge Frank Hooper, who held him in civil contempt and set the fine. Hooper, Maddox claimed, was hooded by a previous decision of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Every table was occupied at his restaurant Saturday, but he said loss of profits caused by attempts to integrate his eating place, together with legal expenses, amounted to $100,000. Expenses that could result from other cases pending might bring the total loss to about $130,000, he reported.

Lincoln Involved In Dispute With Chicago In 1849

SPRINGFIELD III. (AP) — Abraham Lincoln was involved in a dispute between Chicago and the federal government over Michigan Ave. and Ford Dearborn, State Historian Clyde Walton said Saturday.

But, said Walton, although a newly discovered letter written in 1849 by Lincoln shows his interest in the matter, there is no record he ever wrote about it again.

Lincoln wrote to a friend, J. Young Scammon, prominent Chicago alderman, that the case was argued by the attorney general's argument the city had no jurisdiction, he agreed and decided there was nothing else to say.

The government won the case, involving confused claims to land and buildings. The government sought an injunction after Scammon ordered barricades removed from Michigan Ave.

Walton said Lincoln also wrote to Scammon in 1854 but at that time Lincoln was sounding out his friends on his chances to be elected Senator.

First Bills Signed; Committees To Study Mountain Of Business

By Dick Emery Statehouse Correspondent

SPRINGFIELD — Now that the State Legislature has settled down to a normal routine, the Illinois lawmakers can get on with the business of passing legislation.

So far, there are few measures which have passed both houses and gone to the Governor's office. As this is written, Gov. Otto Kerner has signed the first two bills of this session. One authorizes schools to transport their pupils to school-sponsored events such as basketball games and provides for charges to cover costs.

The other is deficiency appropriation of $100,000 to the State Crime Commission.

The General Assembly is well into its routine now with legislative session in the mornings and committee meetings in the afternoons. Most committees used their p.m. sessions last week just to get organized and set some ground rules for future operation.

Committee Theory — The whole theory behind committee functions is to relieve the whole body of each house of the tedious task of wading through the avalanche of bills introduced, especially in the early days of the biennium.

The committees are composed of legislative members, with one serving as chairman of each group.

There are 46 standing committees, 24 in the senate and 22 in the house. As the session grinds on, special committees to handle equally special problems may be appointed.

Bills are channeled to committees according to subject matter, i.e., a wage bill would be assigned to the committee on industry and labor, and an anti-crime measure goes to the judiciary committee.

Many Hearings — Sponsors and witnesses testify during the committee hearings, and the committee's recommendation, either "do pass" or "do not pass" is sent back to the floor with the bill for action by the entire body.

This operation is designed to save time in that as many as six committees can meet at one time. Of course with some legislators serving on more than one committee, conflicts do arise. But a system of proxy balloting has been worked out to alleviate this situation, which arises rarely anyway.

Reapportionment — Already both houses have set up special reapportionment committees to study the proposals of both parties to redraw representation districts for the Senate and the House of Representatives.

Since the U.S. Supreme court ruled last year that both houses of the state legislature should be apportioned on the basis of population, leaders of both political parties have introduced proposals for remapping the state on the basis of this "one man-one vote" edict.

The House reapportionment committee, under the chairmanship of Speaker John P. Touhy, has held several meetings, but the Senate counterpart has yet to sit down at the table. A meeting was slated for last Wednesday, but the absence of a member prompted the chairman, Freshman Sen. Robert Hatch, R-Chicago, to postpone the meeting indefinitely.

The car reportedly spun around and went into a ditch, breaking off a telephone pole at the side of the road.

Fund For Improving Municipal Dog Pound Over $500 Saturday

The fund for the improvement of the municipal dog pound passed $500 Saturday, and also received the contribution of fence wire and posts, an oil heater and 100 gallons of fuel.

Saturday, members of a committee designated to investigate and organize a humane society went to the dog pound for a first hand look at conditions.

Several members of the committee were openly shocked at what they witnessed, and expressed that something would have to be done immediately.

The committee is scheduled to report to the mayor and city council at a regular Monday night session.

Materials donated came in the form of fence and fence posts from Lee Sullivan, an oil heater from Walker Furniture and 50 gallons of fuel oil each from Mr. and Mrs. Edward Blesse and Mr. and Mrs. Leo Woods.

Up until several months ago, the pound had been heated by an old oil heater, which was dismantled because of failure to function properly.

Distribution of surplus commodities to persons receiving public aid will begin February 26 in Morgan county according to an announcement by Erwin C. Aufdenkamp, county superintendent of public aid.

Distribution points have been set up to handle the applicants approved at points in Meredosia, Chapin, Jacksonville, Murrayville, Franklin and Waverly.

The county commissioners of Morgan county, Chester Thomson, chairman, Byron Smith and Harry Thompson adopted a resolution by unanimous vote accepting the program for distribution of federal surplus commodities.

The Morgan county welfare services committee has completed the paperwork with the help of Mr. Aufdenkamp and Frank H. Caldwell.

Eligibility for general assistance and application for surplus commodities will be made to Clarence Souza, administrator of the Morgan county relief administration. Applications from persons who are self-supporting but have limited income will be taken by the Morgan county relief administration employees and if eligible the cards will be issued by the supervisor.

Persons who are eligible immediately for the program will receive notices with their February checks. Included are persons who are now receiving Old Age Assistance, Blind Assistance, Disability Assistance, and Aid to Dependent Children.

Dates for commodity distribution have been set up for the next five months: February 26, March 25, April 29, May 27 and June 25.

Towns, times and locations are listed below:

Meredosia, Legion hall, 8:00 to 8:20 a.m.
Chapin, Legion hall, 8:40 to 8:55 a.m.
Jacksonville, YMCA, 9:15 a.m. to 12:00 noon.
Murrayville, town hall, 12:50 to 1:05 p.m.
Franklin, Legion hall, 1:50 to 2:00 p.m.
Waverly, Legion hall, 2:10 to 2:25 p.m.

Each person must bring his own containers for commodities and must be present on the date and time as the schedule indicates. Schedules will be mailed or given to all persons eligible.

If any person is unable to call for commodities due to health conditions, he may name a proxy who, upon proper identification, may get commodities for that person or persons.

Editorial Comment

Canine Concern

The public response to the article which recently appeared in this newspaper concerning conditions at the city dog pound certainly is a clear indication that many local residents have soft spots in their hearts for old stray dogs as well as little puppies.

While the article at first apparently caused a bit of irritation in some official quarters, it did stimulate widespread interest and may have led directly to the formation of a Humane society or committee.

The net effect of this, we believe, is all to the good. The spontaneous gifts to the dog care fund received by the Chief of Police, wholly unsolicited and without any organized campaign, are steadily mounting. This is a good example of how Jacksonville citizens, alerted to a particular problem, respond quickly and generously.

A Sound Health Care Plan

The American Medical Assn., meeting in Chicago this weekend, will map last-ditch plans for heading off the adoption of a government health care plan for the aged financed under Social Security. The hour is late, for "medicare" is a priority item before Congress and its chances for passage look favorable.

This year, however, the AMA has shifted its ground to a degree that merits a close look on the part of Congress and the public. Abandoning a position that seemed almost wholly negative, the AMA has put forth positive suggestions for helping people over 65 to surmount the crushing financial burden of illness. It is not too late for the AMA plan, or some part of it, to be incorporated into the over-all system the government finally adopts.

Central to the AMA proposal is the use of existing health insurance plans—Blue Cross, Blue Shield and others. The insurance would be made available to everyone over 65. Those who can afford it would pay the regular premiums, but those who cannot afford the cost would be covered anyway, their premiums paid by public funds.

Administration would be at the state, rather than federal, level. A statement of income, and only income, filed with the appropriate state department would determine the applicant's eligibility for help in paying the insurance premiums. No income level has yet been specified, but presumably many elderly persons able to care for their normal needs—but not able to cope with catastrophic illness—would be covered in this manner. Yet public funds would not be needed for the wealthy, and the system could operate on a voluntary basis, unlike the compulsory features of "medicare."

One great advantage of the AMA plan would be the broader coverage provided. Under the King-Anderson bill before Congress, benefits would be minimal—hospitalization for no more than 60 days, with no provision for physician's or surgeon's fees. It is safe to predict that disappointment in the limited range of the government plan would quickly force expansion at untold cost to the public purse. "Medicare" has been oversold; many who favor it erroneously believe it will do more than the bill contemplates.

It is also probable, as the AMA fears, that the "medicare" program would have disastrous effects on both private insurance plans and the delicate relationships among hospitals, doctors and patients. The AMA, which understands many of these things better than the politicians, deserves a respectful hearing for its forward-looking proposals.

Dear Ann:

Misgivings About Rudely Returned Gift

By ANN LANDERS
Dear Ann Landers: A woman in our office is as sweet as honey on the surface but the minute a back is turned she does her dirty work.

She exaggerates details until an ordinary incident becomes a juicy morsel of gossip. Last week I had a birthday. This woman came by my desk with a gift. I was so stunned I could do nothing but thank her. After a few moments I regained my composure and returned the gift—unopened. I told her I could not accept it.

She asked why and I said, "A gift should be given to a friend by a friend." She replied, "But I AM your friend." I told her I didn't think of her that way.

Now I'm afraid I was a little rude. What do you think? —UNDECIDED

Dear Undecided: You were not rude. You were cruel. What a heartless thing to do! If you were victimized by this woman's sharp tongue why didn't you tell her off at the time? This is the way to let people know you don't want their friendship.

Obviously the woman didn't know how you felt about her or she would not have bought you a gift. I don't know her and I don't know you, but based on the letter, I'll take HER.

Dear Ann Landers: We have four children. The oldest is 10 months old, the youngest is 14 months. Five months ago my wife took a part-time job to earn extra money which we didn't need. She left the children first with one neighbor then another without pay. After a while the neighbors resented it and refused to keep the children.

Last month my wife took a full-time job and hired a sloppy, lazy woman who is nothing more than two arms and two legs. When I get home at night I must start supper and straighten up the house. My wife sails in at 6:30 P.M., eats, leaves the dishes and then goes off to an art class, a PTA meeting, a church study class or to a lecture. She expects me to be satisfied because she has a good figure and has given me four children. I need your help.

STEADY READER

Dear Steady: First, keep your home together—for four very good reasons.

Second, YOU hire a competent housekeeper.

Third, see your clergyman about some joint-counseling. A woman who goes to PTA and church meetings and to lectures can't be all bad.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 13-year-old boy. I am glad my parents love me enough to yell at me when I do something wrong. I used to think they were just mean, but I know better now. Good parents are supposed to make rules and see to it that their kids follow them.

I have a friend whose parents let him do anything he wants to do and honestly, Ann Landers, the kid is a mess. He is always in trouble.

Last night a girl called me on the phone and asked me to be her date at a party. I asked my mother and she said, "The answer is NO and that goes for the next three years."

I was glad she said that. Now I don't have to think about dates for a long time. Please print my letter for kids who may not know that strict parents are the best kind. —SMARTER NOW

Dear Smarter: There's an old saying, "If youth but knew what age could tell." Age can too—and you've proved it again.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Washington South Yielding to Edict: 'No Integration, No Money'

By BRUCE BLOSSAT
Washington Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON (NEA) — A great breakthrough against public school segregation is suddenly taking place across the whole sweep of the Old South. The weapon that is opening wide fissures—even in such reluctant states as Mississippi, Louisiana and Alabama—bears the label "Title VI" of the 1964 Civil Rights Act. It is a provision which calls for the cutoff of funds where racial discrimination is practiced in federally aided programs of activities.

More than a score of U.S. departments and agencies have announced rules to carry out this provision. Sixty days from receipt of written notice of such regulations, southern and other school districts which are now getting hundreds of millions of U.S. dollars from a host of programs must sign "letters of assurance" that they will operate on a non-discriminatory basis.

This massive thrust against deeply entrenched school segregation has stirred ferment in the remotest corners of the South. No hammer blow of comparable force has ever been felt. Says a seasoned observer of southern life:

"This is the most powerful coercive tool the federal government has ever had against segregation. And in my judgment, it is going to work."

Here in the capital, on inauguration eve, Louisiana's Gov. John McKeithen tried half-heartedly to shape up a defensive front of southern governors against the inroads of Title VI. His hasty, poorly-planned meeting, which drew just five other governors, ended in 20 minutes in total failure.

The cracks are developing everywhere. Arkansas' State Board of Education has voted unanimously to sign the letters of assurance. Florida and Georgia, whose governors attended McKeithen's brief meeting, are moving in the same direction.

This reporter talked to several veteran observers of the southern scene and found not one who believes the segregationist South can hold out against the money leverage Title VI represents. One in Atlanta says: "This reaches people in a way that court desegregation orders could never do. They're not just talking constitutional law now, they're talking money."

Arkansas' Gov. Orval Faubus, whose resistance to 1957 court orders directing school desegregation in Little Rock touched off an early storm, declared that Title VI "must be lived with." He argues that Arkansas not only needs the money, but also that Negroes badly need the better training involved in upgraded, desegregated schools.

Even in Mississippi, celebrated stronghold of segregation, the cracks are showing. The school board in Greenville has agreed to sign a letter of assurance and is working up a desegregation plan. The move appears to have the support of all community leaders. Another Mississippi town, Tupelo, is said to be on the verge of action.

Mississippi's schools would stand to lose some $22.5 million in annual U.S. funds if they did not sign up. Since just four of the state's 150 school districts are now desegregated under court orders (one of these has no Negroes in attendance), 146 school boards must make up their minds by early March.

Gov. Paul Johnson of Mississippi recently urged the boards not to hurry but to wait until some sort of state policy is set. He joined McKeithen's futile parody in Washington.

No "Mississippi strategy" has yet emerged. Talk of a special legislative session is said to have weakened.

In Mississippi and elsewhere in the South, many segregationist southerners, of course, would like to hold out. They may try to involve the federal government in the new law's complicated, drawn-out procedures for cutting off funds — hoping that meantime the Justice Department, acting on Negro parent's complaints, will file suits compelling them to do what federal regulations "ask" them to do.

The consensus among experienced appraisers is, however, that one way or another the once impregnable school segregation line will be shattered; the message will soon sink in everywhere that the South has no choice.

The observer in Atlanta even suggests southerners will welcome a "final outcome," says he: "The people of the South are tired and worn out from battle."

In Hollywood

By JAMES BACON
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Hollywood always argues whether television stars help ticket sales when they make a movie. Most say they don't.

But Peter Falk, who works steadily in each medium, is gambling that a television series will help his movie career. "Look at Steve McQueen and Jim Garner," says Falk. "They went from television series (McQueen—'Bounty Hunter') (Garner—'Maverick') to a position where they can call their own shots in the movies. That's what I want."

Falk has partnered with Martin Ransohoff, the dynamic young producer who is a blockbuster in both areas.

Ransohoff owns Filmways, Inc. Its four television shows are "The Beverly Hillbillies," "Petticoat Junction," "The Addams Family" and "Mr. Ed," all top-rated shows.

"I decided to go with Ransohoff after he fired William Wyler as director of 'The Americanization of Emily,'" says Falk. "Here's a young guy who didn't like what he saw on the first week of film and fires one of the town's biggest Oscar-winning directors — and Bill Holden along with him."

"I figure a guy like that knows what he's doing," says Falk. He's got class.

In the new television series, Falk plays a colorful lawyer called O'Brien. The series is due to go on the air next fall.

FINDING THE WAY

Much Depends on Little

By RALPH W. LOEW, D.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

It's fascinating to see how dominating ideas are often built on the tiniest of experiences. We know that small events can determine large issues. The old business of "for want of a nail the battle is lost" is really a fact. Woodrow Wilson is reputed to have felt that the Versailles Treaty was influenced in part by the fact that his too-tight shoes hurt his feet. By that tiny experience some of the destiny of nations hung.

Likewise, scraps of experience can determine the opinions or attitudes of whole generations. One small experience is magnified out of proportion and the battle for truth or honor is lost.

The scientist may be able to construct an image of the dinosaur from a very few bones. If he has some mental picture of the dinosaur and is able to make an educated guess from the bones at his disposal, he may come up with a reasonably accurate description.

Yet his guess requires discipline, demands a sense of history, depends upon a patient expression of logic and insists upon a perspective of the whole. Look at the unscientific way in which we take up one of these bones in human relations. The other week I was visiting in a hospital and met a man who had been irritated by a happening in a church in 1903.

He was unhappy because a boy's choir had been eliminated in favor of another form of choir. On that experience he pulled out. What's more, he constructed a dinosaur out of the bone. He thought about it, nursed it, watched it grow and, 60 years later in a hospital, he is possessed by it. When I asked him about his church relationships, he recounted that ancient story as though it had happened yesterday. Only one scrap of experience and he had allowed a dinosaur of a grudge to embitter his life.

One might write that off as the eccentric experience of an odd personage. Yet an analysis of the tensions between nations and races and groups is often as illogical. On a few scraps of experience, we construct the wrong dinosaur.

Once upon a time this might be regarded as the foolishness of the family feud or the dispute of the clan. Now the enormity of power that is vested in our nations makes this problem critical. The same essentials demanded of the scientist are demanded of each of us.

Only those who are creatively able to examine their scraps of experience in the light of yesterday's truth and today's needs are able to patiently strive for the healing of the world.

So you've had an experience — a small but significant one. Before you construct your dinosaur from that one bone, take a long, patient and logical look.

American Menu Build Up Cold Resistance

By GAYNOR MADDOX
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Q—Are there any particular foods or vitamin supplements I can give my family now to prevent their getting winter colds?

A—No. The best way to build up resistance to winter colds is to eat a good varied diet regularly. That means milk and dairy products, meats, fish and poultry, fruits and vegetables, with emphasis on citrus fruits and green vegetables, and breads and cereals, advises Dr. Paul B. Pearson, President of the Nutrition Foundation.

He adds, "If you and your family eat a balanced diet of familiar foods available at your local market, you should not need vitamin supplements, unless white granulated sugars."

specifically recommended by your doctor. All the vitamins normally needed will be found in the foods suggested."

Q—If I substitute brown sugar for white granulated sugar in my apple pie recipe, will I lower the caloric content of the pie?

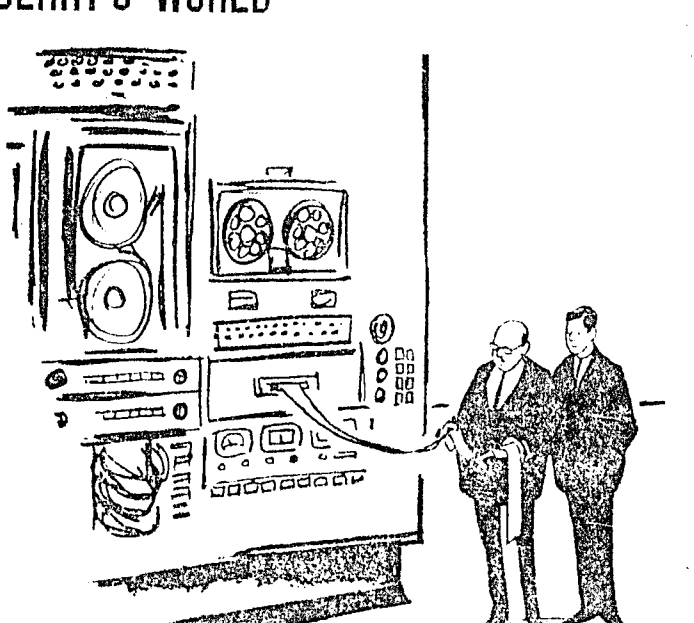

A—In the December issue of Today's Health, Dr. Philip L. White says you would not alter the caloric content significantly. He explains: "One scant half cup of the dark brown sugar (100 grams) contains 370 calories; one-half cup (also 100 grams) of white granulated sugar contains 365 calories. Thus in each piece of pie there would be essentially no caloric difference between the brown and white granulated sugars."

Capital Requirements Often Crippling To Farm Expansion

Farmers, dealers and manufacturers are expanding their business on all fronts, but too often without adequate capital, according to E. F. Dickey, financial management consultant and president of E. F. Dickey and Company.

"The present national picture includes a vast, expanding gross product requiring large amounts of new money, supplied by fewer people who have failed to make adequate provision for essential capital in this explosive growth," Dickey said Tuesday at the University of Illinois Agricultural Industries Forum.

Speaking to a special session of farm suppliers, Dickey pointed out that the ability to borrow funds is not nearly so important as the ability to use funds properly. He said that the term financial needs by borrower's needs and the lender's requirements.

Lenders Plead Guilty
Today lenders look at a borrower's ability to earn, Dickey said. As borrowers demonstrate their ability to make money and pay their debts as agreed, they too liberal with credit, making physical assets become less important.

Adequate records set up by an independent accounting firm, Dickey believes. Failure to supply lenders with the information they need when making loans, for large loans this procedure is essential.

There are large amounts of money for loan from a variety of sources. One single type of financing is often unsuitable to money problems that a business faces. Financing that is tailored to suit a business is as important to total business success as product development, sales or merchandising.

Farm Bureau Seeks 54 New Members

The Morgan County Farm Bureau will stage a 10-day membership drive Feb. 25 — March 6 in an attempt to gain three new members per township, 54 members in all. The present strength of the organization is 1,840.

This campaign was planned at a meeting of the organization committee last Wednesday evening. Walter Alhorn, chairman of the committee, which includes Edward Scott, route 2; Henry Mason, route 2, and Walter J. Creed, Prentice.

'Open Season' For Morgan Wheat Growers

The sign-up for the 1965 feed grain program, covering the period Feb. 8 through March 26, offers winter wheat growers an "open season" for changing their intended participation in the 1965 wheat program. L. Clyde Cooper, member, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation county committee, says.

The sign-up period coming up is the first conducted for spring wheat growers and for growers of corn, barley, and grain sorghum, under the 1965 wheat and feed grain diversion programs.

In predominantly winter wheat areas, however, the wheat program sign-up was conducted last fall, but it was announced at that time that growers who signed up then would have an opportunity to revise their intended participation during the feed grain sign-up period this spring. (A winter wheat grower who signed up last fall may now revise the number of acres to be diverted or may rescind his agreement, March 26 will be the last day for filing revised intentions for taking part in the 1965 wheat and feed grain diversion programs.)

Must Be In Both
Cooper reminded farmers that the program's substitution provision is available only if the participating growers sign up in both the feed grain and the wheat programs. This provision enables growers to substitute wheat for feed grains or feed grains for wheat in qualifying for diversion payments, thereby providing program participants greater flexibility in farming operations. In this case, the rate of the available diversion payment would be based on the crop actually diverted into a conserving use.

Advantages Cited
Farmers who sign up and then meet provisions of the feed grain program may qualify for diversion payments, price-support loans, and price-support payments on the normal yield of the diverted acres. The wheat program offers participating farmers diversion payments, price-support loans, and domestic and export certificates (with a cash value) for the normal production of the allotment, provided it is planted.

The spring wheat sign-up is not applicable in Morgan county.

ILLINOIS OUTLOOK LETTER

SOYBEAN SUPPLIES SHORTER, DEMAND UP FROM YEAR AGO

Soybean supplies are smaller than they were a year ago, while the demand seems to be stronger. These conditions provide a better foundation for prices this year than last, but that does not guarantee that prices will rise.

Soybean stocks in the United States on January 1 totaled 525 million bushels, according to official estimates. This amount was 6 per cent less than was on hand a year earlier. On the other hand, it was larger than many farmers and market people had expected. This supply appears to be about enough to maintain crushings and exports at the same rates as in 1964.

The carryover last October 1 was 32 million bushels, and the new crop was 700 million, making a total supply of 732 million bushels. The 525 million bushels on January 1 indicates a disappearance of only 207 million. But several million bushels of new beans were used before October 1, and crushings and exports during the October-December quarter totaled 211 million bushels.

The figures for crop production and stocks are only estimates, and we would not want to draw strong conclusions from them. But the total stocks on hand January 1 give some support to the idea that the 1964 soybean crop was as large as the official estimate of 700 million bushels.

Farmers' sales large. Farmers have been strong sellers of soybeans. While the 1964 crop was estimated at 700 million bushels, practically the same as the year before, farm stocks on January 1 were estimated at only 191 million bushels, 27 per cent less than the year before.

Farmers, of course, own some beans that are stored in elevators, but the amount is not known.

Farmers had placed 18 million bushels of the 1964-crop soybeans under price-support loans by December 31. This was 63 per cent less than the amount put under loan a year earlier.

Crushings of soybeans in the October-December quarter totaled 131 million bushels, 10 per cent more than a year earlier. Exports during the quarter were 80 million bushels, up 27 per cent from the year before. Some of the big increase in exports was due to efforts to beat the dock strike.

Soybean oil up, meal down. The soybean oil market continues strong. Recent prices were near 12 cents a pound, 4 cents higher than a year earlier. Since a bushel of soybeans produces about 11 pounds of oil, the rise in the price of oil is equivalent to 44 cents per bushel of beans.

Soybean meal prices continue lower than last year. Recent quotations were around $69.00 a ton, off $7 or $8 from a year ago. It takes about 42 bushels of beans to produce a ton of meal. Thus the value of soybean meal per bushel of soybeans is down 18 to 20 cents. This decrease in value of meal offsets part of the rise in value of soybean oil.

The increase in soybean oil prices is part of a world-wide rise in prices of fats and oils. It has a good chance to be maintained for a few months at least. The cut in prices of soybean meal reflects increased output of meal and some cutback in production of hogs.

Alexander Man On Export Board

LEONARD W. KRAMP, president of the Illinois National Farmers Organization, with headquarters at Alexander, will serve on the transportation and government co-ordinating committees of the Illinois Agricultural Export Advisory committee, according to a recent announcement. He was appointed a member of the special committee last spring by Governor Otto Kerner.

The committee was created in 1963 by the State Legislature through bi-partisan sponsorship to promote an increase in the sale of Illinois farm products abroad. Headed by Robert C. Liebenow, president of the Chicago Board of Trade as chairman, it is composed of leading businessmen, farmers, legislators, and educators throughout the state.

Robert M. Schneider, director of the Illinois Department of Agriculture, serves as its executive secretary.

"This committee has a three-fold purpose," Schneider pointed out. "Specifically, it was set up to provide a consulting service for persons desiring to export farm products; to cooperate with federal agencies in the development and regulation of export grade standards for farm commodities; and to develop a functional program for present and potential foreign importers of farm products, supplies and implements."

Following the announcement of his appointment to the two Illinois Agricultural Export Advisory Committees inner committees, Kramp said: "By representing Illinois farmers, I am obviously interested in exports which each year claim a larger percentage of Illinois agricultural commodities. This should, and could, have great bearing on net income of the greatest and most efficient producer, the family-type farmer."

Kramp, now 46, attended Marquette University, Milwaukee, Wis., and started to work for Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., in Springfield, Ill., at 50 cents an hour. He left 11 years later as general foreman in the planning department to devote full time to farming. "I was born and raised in the city, married the farmer's daughter, moved to a farm to learn farm operation by actual experience and am still learning and still doing most of the work myself."

1965 Feed Grain Program Sign-Up For Farm Supplies, Sees Larger Demand Sharper Competition

The sign-up for the 1965 feed grain program soon will begin Monday at the ASCS county office, 15 Permac Road, Jacksonville, according to Floyd Goodpasture of the Morgan County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation committee. The sign-up period will continue through March 26.

Goodpasture explained that the program for 1965 is basically the same as in 1964. It is voluntary, and combines corn, grain sorghum, and barley in a single feed grain base. Participating farmers will qualify for diverted acre and price support payments, and they will be eligible for price support loans.

Farmers who take part in the program may divert for payment as small an acreage as 20 percent of the farm's feed grain base or as large an acreage as 50 percent of the base—or 25 acres, if this is larger.

Two Payment Rates
Two rates of diversion payment are offered. The lower rate applies to the first 20 percent of the feed grain base actually diverted. The higher rate applies to diverted acreage in excess of the minimum. If both the intended diversion and the acreage actually diverted are equal to at least 40 percent of the base, the higher rate applies to the entire acreage diverted.

The 1965 program includes new provisions which provide an opportunity to substitute feed grains for wheat or wheat for feed grains by growers who take part in both programs.

In the decade ahead, the expected expansion in farm production will increase the market for farm supplies.

In outlining future markets for farm supplies and services at the Agricultural Industries Forum on the University of Illinois campus Tuesday Dale E. Butz, director of economic research, FS Services, Inc., described as the most exciting and glamorous of these markets the rapidly expanding one for plant food. The rate and amount of fertilizer use will have an impact on total agricultural production and therefore on all farm supply industries, he said.

Prices for fertilizers have been stable in recent years. Butz noted. But lower prices can be expected for some nutrients, particularly nitrogen, because of present lower production costs.

Major unknowns in predicting future plant food markets, however, are the total acreage to be planted and the crops to be grown. Butz remarked. The probability that government farm programs may cause additional crop acreage to be idled would also affect the potential market for plant food.

Moving on to other farm supply products, Butz said that it was difficult to be optimistic about the total petroleum market. The shift to minimum tillage may be almost complete, but farmers will use larger, more efficient tractors and other machines as well as better management to reduce fuel use on a per-acre basis. A decline of one to two percent a year in the farm fuel market is therefore likely during the next decade.

Expanding Feed Use

Butz expects the commercial feed market to increase in line with livestock numbers, feed and the type of feed used. Pork will increase about 1½ to 2 percent a year, and beef numbers will rise about 2½ to 3 percent a year. Total milk production may increase at about the same rate as population growth, but it will be achieved with increasing fewer cows.

Continued growth of large commercial poultry enterprises is favored in Illinois because of the location near large consumer markets and favorable feed prices, Butz said. As this trend develops, the drop in layer numbers will slow and probably reverse itself.

What kind of commercial feed will be used in the future is the subject of much debate, Butz pointed out. In cattle feeding the use of a urea high-protein compound that can be mixed with farm-produced grains and roughages may reduce the potential market for beef cattle feed. However, a gradual increase in on-the-farm feed grinding and mixing may be expected.

A Different Customer

Although the total market for farm supplies will be larger, Butz said that the decreasing number of farms and farmers would create a new type of customer. Future customers for farm supplies will be the fewer, larger farmers who will expect more and get more from their suppliers in technical assistance, management help and possibly credit.

Competition in the farm supply market will be more intense for this type of business, Butz predicts. Some organizations may find it hard, if not impossible, to compete in such an environment. The result may be fewer, larger firms to supply farmers with their production needs.

We say . . . "I'll leave no footprints."
But good friends, we are wrong.
For each of us will leave some kind.
To stand out . . . when we're gone:
We hope, or should, they will be good.
And worth-while, Father God, The acts and deeds, we leave behind.
When we return . . . to God: The pretty flowers will wilt away.
And lie there on the ground, But the smiles and tears, We scattered here . . . Will "always" . . . drift around!

Boy With A Drum

By Mrs. Otto Dorr

Editor's note: The following rat-a-tat! another corner, story is a true one, and the Rat-a-tat! and down the author says that her father, street to the square where who was the drummer boy, Lincoln would speak and the liked to recall this day at drumsticks be quiet.

RALLY FOR LINCOLN

For days Willie had heard his father talk excitedly about a rally and a parade for Mr. Lincoln. "The parade is coming directly down our street from the boat landing," Father said, "You must be ready to play your drum in good marching rhythm when he goes past. We'll have a practice every evening."

So Will and his father drummed until the little boy knew exactly the right drum beat and the five year old arms and wrists grew strong to drum steadily.

Clear and hot August the 28th, 1858 came. Father left for town early; he was Mayor and must be certain that all was ready at the boat landing, carriages, drivers, and citizens who had been chosen to ride.

"When you hear the boat whistle," he had told his son, "Watch for us. Lincoln will be in the carriage with me."

William sat on the front step, his drum and drumsticks beside him while strangers gathered on the sidewalk, ladies with parasols, little children, and restless men looking far down the road where carriages crossed. More and more people pressed against his white fence until a loud, low, boat whistle sounded.

When To Drum? Willie put on his drum and Mother came down the path. Between pickets he could see one dresses, parasols, shoes and suits pressed close together: nowhere could he see the road. How would he know when to drum? Quickly his mother reached down and swung him to the top of their gate post, mooring him safely with her arms. Clap, clap, clap, he heard the horses feet, held to a walk. Over shoulders and between hats the parade came in sight, little puffs of dust rose from wheels and carriages rolled sedately near.

"Look, Willie," Mother whispered, "There is your father in that carriage! Now drum!" Rat-a-tat! Rat-a-tat! sounded clearly. A stranger beside his father smiled.

"Whose boy is that?" he asked. "He is my son," came the answer.

Lincoln Stops "Stop the carriage," Lincoln spoke, "We need a drummer in this parade. Bring him here."

Quickly someone's arm lifted a Will and put him up beside his father. Again his drumbeats sounded, the horses started and the parade moved on, Rat-a-tat! around the corner, Rat-a-tat!

Let's Go Birding

Challenges To Proud Mortals

By Emma Mae Leonhard

It takes a great deal of patience and time, we must grant, to master the different characteristics between the English Sparrow and the European Tree Sparrow; the Song Sparrow and the Vesper Sparrow; the Nashville Warbler and the Connecticut Warbler; the Carolina Wren and the Winter Wren; the Barn Swallow and the Cliff Swallow; and many other small birds that may look alike to most people. This is why the hobby of bird watching and bird identifying never sinks into the boredom of easiness.

Some of us say, "We'll settle for the larger birds that we can more easily see or find." Our large birds aren't always easy to differentiate either. Hawks, for example, can be easily seen in the tops or branches of dead trees, which they often choose, and they can also look much alike.

Frequently we must see them take off and fly before we can successfully identify them. And we must be quick and alert to catch the color or the markings of the tail or the breast.

Is the tail red, pink, or white? Does it have black bands? Does the hawk soar and sail, or does it hover? Before we can decide to our satisfaction, it is high in the sky, sometimes hidden in the clouds, and soon a tiny speck secure in distance and lost in space.

Owls Can Fool Us

Let us now think of owls, large birds in general, and not so swift as hawks. We should have no challenge in finding and identifying them, we may think. Yet many a time we have passed by one of our largest birds, the Great Horned Owl, unaware of its dignified presence and undisturbed observation of us. Back in the protection of shadows of Hemlock or pine branches its body, nearly two feet long, capped by a large head with protruding ear tufts, is hidden from our gaze.

If this Great Horned Owl becomes a bit uneasy and flies to another tree, we then have no trouble in enjoying it. If crows have found it and are peering at it with their threatening strikes and scolding caws, we may know where to search for this alluring bird.

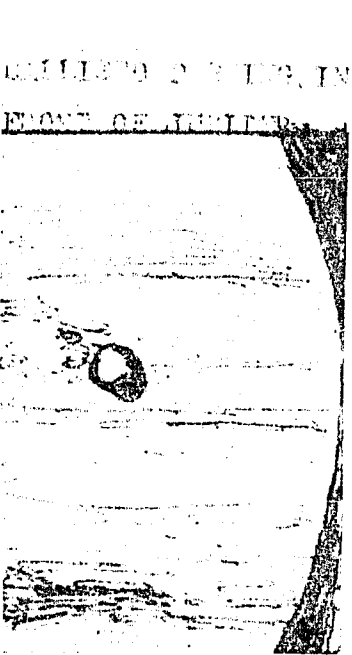

If the crows finally push the great owl from its seclusion, we can easily sort it out from its cawing pursuers, watch for its near-by refuge, and enjoy its presence. In most cases, we must concede one thing: we have had help in finding and enjoying this largest of our large owls.

How proud should we mortals be when we can't even find a Great Horned Owl? This is a challenging question as tantalizing as are small birds, large the parade moved on, Rat-a-tat! birds, swift birds, and slow

Rockets And Space—

HOT SHADOWS

By WALTER B. HENDRICKSON JR.

There are many strange things about the largest planet in the solar system.

Among these are the strange hot shadows cast on Jupiter when one or another of its twelve satellites passes between it and the sun.

This was discovered by two scientists at the California Institute of Technology (Caltech), Dr. Bruce C. Murray and Dr. Robert L. Wilder. At the time they were testing a new photometer. This instrument which is twenty to fifty times as accurate as earlier models, was attached to the 200-inch wide Mt. Palomar telescope.

During the test they took the temperature of the shadow of Callisto, one of Jupiter's moons, which was then passing in front of Jupiter.

Expected Temperature Drop They expected the temperature on Jupiter to drop as the shadow passed over. This is what happens when the moon's shadow crosses earth during a solar eclipse. Instead of dropping the temperature actually rose over 100 degrees from -230 degrees to a sizzling (for Jupiter) -117 degrees.

The scientists checked and rechecked these findings but came up with the same results.

What could cause this apparent violation of the laws of Nature? Doctors Murray and Wilder have two possible explanations. When the shadow passes over it could disturb Jupiter's thick, cloudy atmosphere allowing warm air to rise from below. Or the shadow might cause the atmosphere to become clearer allowing scientists to see the warm layers below.

Strange Moon

Another strange thing found by the Caltech team was that Callisto reflects twice as much heat as most moons. Callisto also has the strange habit of turning black all over at times. Scientists have not yet found out why it does this. Could it have something to do with the extra heat that this moon puts out?

Callisto and Ganymede are Jupiter's two largest moons. They are both 3,200 miles wide. We can see Callisto, Ganymede and the two other large moons of Jupiter, Io and Europa, with a medium sized telescope. More powerful telescopes show that these moons have markings much like our moon.

Jupiterians Need Telescopes It takes a very powerful telescope indeed to see the smaller moons of Jupiter. Even the Jupiterians, if there are any, would need telescopes to see Hades, their outermost moon. This 12-mile-wide moon is 14,700,000 miles from Jupiter.

Many scientists think that Hades and the other four outer moons of Jupiter, Adrestia, Pan and Poseidon, are really planetoids that Jupiter captured. They think this because these moons go around backward. That is, they orbit in the opposite direction to Jupiter's rotation. Scientists call this "retrograde" motion. Most satellites move the same direction as the planet they orbit rotates.

Said to be the mountain from which Moses descended with the Ten Commandments, Gebel Musa is located on the Sinai Peninsula.

Stone age men hunted the smaller whales and dolphins. Eskimos and North American Indians whaled from ancient times with weapons of bone and horn, flint and slate; one Alaskan whaling settlement has been dated back to A.D. 100 or 200. In the 1860s, when whaling was declining from overfishing, the industry received new lease on life when a cannon was developed to fire a heavy grenade harpoon.

Marching Through Carolina

From the memoirs of General W. T. Sherman

On a road, marching by the flank, it would be considered "good order" to have five thousand men to the mile, so that a full corps of thirty thousand men would extend six miles, but with the average trains and batteries of artillery the probabilities are that it would draw out to ten miles. On a long and regular march the divisions and brigades should alternate in the lead, the leading division should be on the road by the earliest dawn, and march at the rate of about two miles, or, at most, two and one-half miles an hour, so as to reach camp by noon. Even then the rear divisions and trains will hardly reach camp much before night.

Supply Trains Require Sharp Management

An ordinary army wagon drawn by six mules may be counted on to carry three thousand pounds net, equal to the food of a full regiment of 1,000 men for one day, by driving along beef-cattle a commissary may safely count the contents of one wagon sufficient for two days' food for the same number. Unless the officers give the subject their personal attention, they will find their wagon-trains loaded with knapsacks of the escort. Each soldier, if not actually "sick and wounded," should carry his musket and equipments containing from forty to sixty rounds of ammunition, his shelter-tent, a blanket or overcoat, and an extra pair of pants, socks and drawers, in the form of a scarf, worn from the left shoulder to the right side in lieu of a knapsack, and in his haversack he should carry some bread, cooked meat, salt, and coffee.

I do not believe a soldier should be loaded down too much, but, including his clothing, arms, and equipment, he can carry about fifty pounds without impairing his health or activity. A simple calculation will show that by such a distribution a corps will carry the equivalent of five hundred wagon-loads—an immense relief to the trains.

Coffee Essential To Army's Welfare

Where an army is near one of our many large navigable rivers, or has the safe use of a railway, it can usually be supplied with the full army ration, which is by far the best furnished to any army in America or Europe; but when it is compelled to operate away from such a base, and is dependent on its own train of wagons, the commanding officer must exercise a wise discretion in the selection of his stores.

In my opinion there is no better food for man than beef-cattle driven on the hoof, issued liberally, with salt, bacon, and bread. Coffee has also become almost indispensable, though many substitutes were found for it, such as Indian-corn, roasted, ground, and boiled as coffee; the sweet-potato, and the seed of the okra-plant prepared in the same way. All these were used by the people of the South, who for years could procure no coffee, but I noticed that the women always begged of us for some REAL coffee, which seems to satisfy a natural craving or yearning more powerful than can be accounted for on the theory of habit.

Therefore I would always advise that the coffee and sugar ration be carried along, even at the expense of bread, for which there are many substitutes.

Of these Indian-corn is the best and most abundant. Parched in a fry-pan, it is excellent food, or if ground, or pounded and boiled with meat of any sort, it makes a most nutritious meal. The potato, both Irish and sweet, forms an excellent substitute for bread, and at Savannah we found the rice also suitable, both for men and animals. For the former it should be cleaned of its husk in a hominy block, easily prepared out of a log, and sifted with a coarse corn-bag, or winnowed; but for horses it should be fed in the straw.

Scurvy No Problem For Alert Troops

I recall the extreme anxiety of my medical director, Dr. Kittoe, about the scurvy, which he reported at one time as spreading and imperiling the army. This occurred at a crisis about Kenesaw, when the railroad was taxed to its utmost capacity to provide the necessary ammunition, food, and forage, and could not possibly bring us an adequate supply of potatoes and cabbage, the usual anti-scurvics, when providentially the blackberries ripened and proved an admirable antidote, and I have known the skirmish line, without orders, to fight a respectable battle for the possession of some old fields that were full of blackberries. Soon,

THE TWENTIETH CORPS Entering Blackville, South Carolina.—The cavalry had already gained Blackville, on the railroad west of Branchville, and was soon followed by the Twentieth Corps. Thus, it will be seen, the left wing was rapidly coming up into position. Several miles of the railroad west of Branchville were destroyed. This completely isolated Augusta. —HARPER'S WEEKLY.

The soldiers shown in the sketch could well have been Morgan county men, for the Morgan county regiment, the 101st Illinois was a part of the 20th, which made up the left wing of Sherman's plunge through the Carolinas a hundred years ago. The Jacksonville men in the 10th Illinois were in the 17th Corps, the right wing, some 30-40 miles to the east.

The Substitute Business

A hundred years ago the editor of the Carrollton GAZETTE wrote:

The substitute business has got to be one of monstrous proportions. Every day we see more or less human beings in charge of some person, on their way to Jacksonville: in fact every man you meet is engaged in some with the business, or looking out for a good chance. The substitute business was truly booming. It was strictly a seller's market, with prices going up every day.

In Morgan county's first draft, in September, 1864, a draftee with money had a relatively easy time finding somebody to take his place. The going price here was $600 to $800. But as the wheel turned and turned the price went up.

Then when President Lincoln called for 300,000 additional troops, in January, 1865, the business went wild. Substitutes asked for and got as much as $3,000 right here in Jacksonville.

"Flesh Merchants"

This kind of money attracted many people, many different types of people. Those with a little financial backing and political connections literally reaped a harvest of gold and greenbacks. They didn't mind being called "flesh merchants" as long as the money kept pouring in.

"The bounty merchants," said the Chicago TRIBUNE, "scour the vilest dens daily and nightly in search of victims. The wiles which they resort to include getting a man drunk, and making him sign a promise while in a state of intoxication, which they frighten him into keeping when sober."

The Chicago police helped much in the business, but they generally weren't criticized too much "since it is difficult for them to support a family on a monthly salary of $50, what with food and clothing and fuel costing threefold what it did at the beginning of the conflict."

Some Judges Help

The courts also came in for criticism. For minor offenses judges "in the ring" would impose very heavy fines and prison sentences, which they said they would stay if the prisoner thereafter, the green corn or roasting-ear came into season, and I heard no more of the scurvy. Our country abounds with plants which can be utilized for a prevention to the scurvy; besides the above are the persimmon, the sassafras root and bud, the wild-mustard, the "agave," turnip-tops, the dandelion cooked as greens, and a decoction of the ordinary pine-leaf.

Shade of Tree Better Than Hospital

A great majority of wounds and of sickness should be treated by the regimental surgeon, on the ground, under the eye of the colonel. As few should be sent to the brigade or division hospital as possible, for the men always receive better care with their own regiment than with strangers, and as a rule the cure is more certain; but when men receive disabling wounds, or have sickness likely to become permanent, the sooner they go far to the rear the better for all. The tent or the shelter of a tree is a better hospital than a house, whose walls absorb febrile and poisonous emanations, and then give them back to the atmosphere. To men accustomed to the open air, who live on the plainest food, wounds seem to give less trouble and pain, and heal much more readily, than in barracks.

The Substitute Business

enlisted. If he agreed he was promptly sold at the going rate and the money divided among those in the ring.

Substitute brokers were little interested in the qualifications of the recruits whom they presented and through collusion with enrolling boards and examining physicians they filled the Army with "elderly men with dyed hair, children, idiots, cripples from birth, persons of disease of long standing, and rebel deserters."

General William T. Sherman said that he found volunteer soldiers generally superior to drafted men, although some of the latter made excellent soldiers, and that substitutes, generally speaking, were from the bottom of the barrel and virtually useless.

Even Poor At Start

The first drafted men and substitutes from this county were assigned to the 10th Illinois Infantry regiment, joining in October, 1864. The drafted men did well and were mustered out with his regiment the following July; the record of the substitutes was very poor, with over half deserting and about one-fourth receiving a medical discharge which put them in line for an early pension.

A hundred years ago tonight the Jacksonville police, sheriff deputies and the provost guard raided a combination gin joint and brothel that had been running unmolested and wide open, 168 hours a week, for more than four years.

Eleven men and five women were caught in the raid. Three of the men had Jacksonville family connections and were fined $5 and costs for being an inmate of a disorderly house; the keeper was fined $25 and costs; the girls $10 and costs, and the other seven men were thrown into the army. Three of them were deserters from the Union army and one was a deserter from the 2nd Kentucky regiment, C.S.A.

A soldier's widow, by marrying again, forfeits all her pension from the date of her marriage, and if she again becomes a widow she cannot resume them.

The Philadelphia PRESS gives on the authority of a gentleman who has lived in that State for the last four years, that Georgia is completely tired of the war.

The Montgomery APPEAL accuses Gen. Kirby Smith of flat rebellion to the rebel President's authority, he having positively refused to transfer his army from the west side of the Mississippi to the east. Some boldly accuse him of intending to march his troops into the service of the Mexican Emperor.

John Steel died the other day, in Philadelphia, from the kick of a horse. He was the wealthiest man in Pennsylvania. Income, $3,000 a day from oil.

An "intelligent Frenchman" is about to open a cooking academy in New York, where a course of 20 lessons will turn out professional cooks armed with diplomas, to bake, boil, roast and stew. The exercises of this culinary academy are so arranged that mistresses and servants come on alternate days — provided the former are ambitious to learn the secrets of the kitchen.

The following "hard-tack" story is told: "It appears that the boxes in which the biscuits are packed always bear the brand of the baker, and a lot which arrived in the camp of the 5th New York Excelsiors, with the mark, 'B.C. 603,' caused much speculation among the 'boys' as to what it meant. It was finally agreed unanimously that it must be the date when the crackers were made — 603 years before Christ."

— Frank Leslie's Newspaper

The next night one of the "enlistees" tried to escape. Editor Bailey of the Jacksonville SENTINEL wrote:

A PEPPERY SUBJECT — Late on last Saturday night, a substitute while under charge of one of the provost guard, on the east side of the square, suddenly threw pepper in the eyes of the guard and "made tracks." The guard, although blinded and confused by the unexpected peppery favor bestowed, fired after him without effect.

The entire provost guard on duty immediately turned out and started in pursuit. Near the railroad they discovered a person they supposed to be the absconding substitute, and forthwith made vigorous chase, calling on him to halt. The individual took to his heels and was fired on, and thus brought to a stand, when it was discovered that he was not the man they wanted, but a very much frightened gentleman of African descent — a true Lincoln pet—who imagined Jeff Davis and his crew were after him.

It is reported that the substitute who "played sharp" on the guard has since been arrested, tried by Court Martial, and condemned to be shot.

He was caught by a farmer east of town and sent to Camp Butler, where he was "sentenced" to report to the 10th Illinois Infantry, then moving north through the muck of South Carolina. He managed to escape by jumping off a Great Western train as it slowed down to stop at the Decatur station.

It was just as well, judging from the accomplishments of the substitutes this county sent to the army in February, 1865. Those that didn't desert got sick and landed in the hospital. None ever saw the 10th Infantry.

It was a good thing the South was on its last legs, for the North was scraping the proverbial bottom of the barrel.

The manufacture of the great Atlantic telegraph cable is progressing very satisfactorily in England. The length made now averages 80 miles per week. As it is necessary that the cable should be kept constantly immersed in water, eight large tanks have been constructed to contain it, from which it will be coiled into the Great Eastern. The entire cable will be ready by June next.

News, Views Century Ago

From The Jacksonville Journal: SKATING—Lovers of skating will be happy to learn that there is splendid ice at present on the Mauvaisterre Creek, which we are sorry to say is the best skating park we know of in this section of the country. Improve your time. Skaters, this may be your last chance of this winter.

THE NEW JAIL—Commenced last fall—is approaching completion and presents a very pretty and attractive exterior, although strong iron cells and massive iron doors are not very inviting to rogues. The building is a vast improvement on the old den, which was a disgrace to the county, and to humanity. It is to be hoped that hereafter we shall have no general "jail delivery," except as ordered by the court.

TWO SCOUNDRELS — New York pickpockets—came to grief in this rural precinct last week. They robbed a gentleman of a little money, were arrested, tried, bound over in the sum of $500 each to appear in court at the March term. Were bailed out by persons in want of substitutes, and went to serve Uncle Sam until discharged. Served 'em right—only not enough so.

The Jacksonville Draft Insurance Co. put up the bail money and the two "enlistments" were credited to Jacksonville and assigned to Co. A, 10th Illinois Infantry, then plowing through the mud of South Carolina. One man escaped from his guards at Camp Butler, east of Springfield, and the other got away at Louisville, Ky.

THE APPROACHING DRAFT—Jacksonville precinct has always responded to every call of the President, each time sending more men than were demanded, and now there seems a probability of a demand for more than her rightful share. She offers, by the munificence of her citizens, $500 bounty out of her own pockets for volunteers. We must have no draft in Jacksonville.

We are for crushing the rebellion and conquering peace, and will not be behind in doing what is necessary to reduce the enemies of the country to subjection to the laws. Barring the scoundrels and thieves, which Missouri and the South has furnished us, Jacksonville is a good place to live in.

A VETERAN COLONEL—Lt. Col. M. F. Wood, who has served with distinction nearly four years, having commanded one of the original three months' companies from this place, is raising a regiment under the last call from Gov. Oglesby and we hear that two companies are well on the way in this county. Col. W. has the good wishes of all for his success, and we congratulate those of our citizens who have volunteered under him. They can serve under a gallant and brave leader when the Colonel commands.

The two companies were filled by Feb. 10. One, consisting of men from Jacksonville and the southern part of the county, became Co. G, 149th regiment, Capt. William Standage of Waverly commanding. The other company, from Jacksonville and the northern part of the county, became Co. K, 154th regiment, Capt. William W. McAllister of Jacksonville commanding.

Col. Wood of the 154th was commandant at Nashville when he died of typhoid fever Aug. 6, 1865.

From The Jacksonville Courier: THE DRAFT — The citizens of Jacksonville have been acting with energy and zeal within the last week to exempt this city and precinct from the draft. Three meetings have been held upon the subject.

ATTRACTIVE EXHIBITION — Mons. Adrien, the great Paris Magician, exhibited at Strawn's Hall last night to a large audience. The entertainment consisted of phantasmagoria, dissolving views, ethereal suspension, inimitable sleight-of-hand, &c.

We learn that during the present week, our city authorities have passed an ordinance requiring a license of $2,000 from Substitute Brokers. We suggested some months ago to our town authorities the justice and propriety of requiring city license from substitute brokers, who have been making large amounts of money in their business without paying special tax for the same, as do all operators in other classes of trade and business.

But we cannot see the policy of fixing the license tax so high as to cut off all competition and turn all of the business into the hands of a select wealthy few. In imposing such a license our town authorities manifest their forte of running things in the ground.

Some of our prominent citizens are making exertions to secure the location of the state fair, next fall, at Jacksonville. To this end subscription lists are in circulation to secure a fund to fit up the grounds to fill the specifications of the state committee, &c.

Jacksonville readily raised $10,000 for its bid for the 1865

West's vulnerable overcall was not the sort of bid that should be made into a steady diet and when North doubled West was on his way to the cleaners. East's rescue to one spade was no better but West got out of trouble with his two club bid and would have remained out of trouble if his partner had not made just about the worst two bids made in the world championship team trials. North suspected that West had been fooling with his heart overcall and bid two hearts. South went to three diamonds. He did have a mighty good diamond suit. North persisted with hearts and at this point East started his career of misdoubling.

East knew that his partner would actually have some sort of a heart suit and East reasoned that a club lead would hurt North at hearts. He was right about that. Repeated club leads would have held North to seven tricks and if East had been able to put glue on his heart double the bid would have been fine.

South passed. He had told his story and trusted that his partner knew what he was doing. It turned out that North did know what he was doing because North ran out of three hearts into four diamonds.

East pounced on this bid like a hungry wolf but East should have been glad to get out of the auction alive. East did have four diamonds but his only high card strength was in his partner's club suit and it should have been apparent to him that he was not going to make many club tricks.

Thus his first double drove his opponents out of a losing contract to a winning one. His second double increased their plus from 150 to 910 because South managed to make five odd at his doubled four-diamond contract.

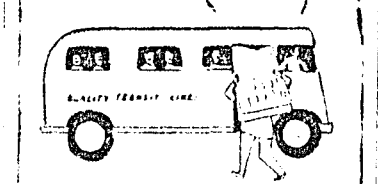

The bidding has been:
North East South West
1 ♣ 1 ♥ 1 ♠ 1 ♠
Pass 3 ♣ 4 ♣ 4 ♣
Pass Pass

You, South, hold:
A2 ♠ K765 ♠ 32 ♠ A ♠ 943
What do you do now?
A—Bid five clubs. Your partner may make this contract and your opponents are very likely to make four spades.

TODAY'S QUESTION
Instead of passing four spades, your partner doubles. What do you do in this case?
Answer Monday

Next time you serve liver paste as a spread for crackers, you might like to try adding pine nuts to it. Interesting flavor and texture change for company!

Gun Duel at Tiedown

By Nelson C. Nye

Distributed by Newspaper Enterprise Assn. © 1965, Nelson C. Nye

THE STORY: Hattie Griswell had just told Getch Spangler that he won't be pushed around. Getch, the toughest rancher in the county, had things his own way long enough. Sheriff Price Jones feels inadequate to stop trouble between the two.

VI
Griswell smiled with his teeth.

"I'd like to give this community a chance to discover just how little you really are. I've got a horse I'll run against any nag you own."

"Hoo hoo," Getch jerked. "That stolen pony horse, mebbe?"

"My stallion, Jubal Jo."

Spangler, head to one side, considered him, probably thinking back to the stock he and Trimbo had just looked through in Griswell's stables. "Never heard of him," he scoffed.

The dude curled his lips. "You're hardly likely to have heard of a horse that has not raced. I'll tell you the much: He's by the Kentucky Derby winner, Plaudit, the defeated Lieber Karl."

"Thoroughbred, eh?"

"That's right."

"You poor deluded fool!" Spangler looked his contempt. "You got no more chance of a June frost at Yuma."

Griswell came back. "If you're so high on those short-winded dogs why not put your money where your mouth is?"

Spangler snorted. "You'd take on Curran Raiser? Right be it."

"Pick your best."

"How far?" Getch said, beginning to show caution. "Half a mile?"

Griswell laughed, saw it up that Hat Creek range with darken Getch's cheeks. "What's your best distance? You're the challenged party. Make it easy on yourself."

Spangler and his range boss exchanged smug looks. "You hard boot jaspers never learn a thing," Getch declared, peering down at him, "but a man's a nump not to humor a sucker. If you're bound and determined to take you on for a quarter for some halfwitted mouse."

For five hundred a side," He winked at Trimbo.

Jones winced, embarrassed, as Griswell in his most insufferable tone wanted to know if that was all Getch could scrape up. "When I was talking to Gattison — our estimable printer — about the chances of getting out a broadside, the figure I thought of was 10 thousand."

Spangler's eyes bulged out. "I'd walked into a wall."

"Those handbills, probably, are up by now but of course, Griswell said with a shake of the head, "if you're not that confident, or plain can't afford it, I suppose we can call the whole thing off. Seems a shame — everybody knowing — I suppose they'll figure I froze you out."

Spangler, cheeks livid, drew a shuddery breath and half strangled gasped: "Does it have to be cash?"

Griswell appeared to mulch over while everyone, breathless, hung on his words. "I don't think," he smiled, "I'd care to fool you with notes, but if you want to put it up that Hat Creek range with the buildings and equipment stored at Dead Soldier's Flat and throw in 40 tons of top quality hay in lieu of actual banknotes, you've got yourself a deal."

Getch, as the dude laid down these terms, began to expand like a bad case of bloat. Crumpled to the gills with insufferable emotions, the twisting fury raging through his blood seemed as threateningly explosive as a bottle of blasting oil and Jones, peering nervously for something to get under, had the look of a man who thought the sky was going to fall.

Spangler couldn't speak he was so furiously mad.

Griswell wasn't done; he had to rub it in. "Sheriff," he said, "I call on you to bear me out. Spangler here, if I understand this right, undertakes on the second day of the Fair to run against my stallion Jubal Jo over a course of 440 measured yards one of those puddingfoot cross-breds he named a moment ago, Eight Below or Curtain Raiser."

"If he wins I'll pay him $10,000. If he loses he agrees to sign over to me 40 tons of top quality hay, his Hat Creek range, plus the buildings and equipment presently stored at Dead Soldier's Flat."

Jones, not looking at Spangler, groaned. "Why don't you leave me out of this?"

The dude, sharply looking Jones up and down, said: "I would hate to believe, as the county's top officer, we've elected a man derelict in his duty. You heard it. Is my summation correct?"

Jones lugubriously nodded. Griswell peered at Getch. "Do you agree?"

Spangler glared like a dog with a bone.

WHAT'S ELECTROLYSIS?

There are few things more embarrassing to a woman than a patch of unwanted hair on her face. A superfluous growth of hair on her upper lip or on her cheek usually causes extreme self-consciousness and unhappiness.

The hair can be removed several ways. It can be shaved off, erased by a depilatory, abrasive or waxing, or removed by tweezing. However, all of these methods are temporary and must be repeated frequently to keep the hair under control. There is only one permanent way of doing the job and that's by electrolysis.

In electrolysis the papilla, which is source of the hair's life, is destroyed thus killing hair's growth.

The latest method of electrolysis that has been perfected is called thermolysis, it operates via a short wave machine, the principle of which is to coagulate the hair papilla by high frequency current.

Hawks Stave Off Rockets Near End

CARROLLTON — The Carrollton Hawks staved off a late Routt rally in the closing minutes to preserve a slim 53-48 non-conference count over the Rockets here Friday evening.

Although leading all the way, the Hawks were never safely in front. A seven-point halftime lead soon disappeared and the game went down to the wire.

Entering the final minutes, Carrollton held a seemingly safe 50-38 margin. Jerry McGinnis hit four quick points to narrow the gap to 50-42 with 4:09 remaining in the tilt.

Ed Hindelang canned a free toss for Carrollton, but Bill Tomplin countered with a bucket and McGinnis further narrowed the difference to 51-46 with 1:24 to play.

Rocket Second Quarter Nets 30-64 Loop Edge

RUSHVILLE — Rushville used a 21-8 difference in a decisive second quarter to build a lead they never lost in racing to an 80-64 Spoon River conference margin over Lewistown Friday evening.

Lewistown had fast-broke to a surprising 28-18 first quarter lead on the Rockets, but fell cold in the second and trailed by three at halftime. Rushville continued to pull away in the second half, mainly on a 23-15 fourth period.

The winning Rockets shot a respectable 47% for the game. In a instrumental in the second stanza was eight points by Mike Lunt, while Bob Wise added eight in the fourth.

All five Rushville starters scored in double figures, led by Mike Lunt's 21 and Jim Shelt's 19. Tom Young paced the losers with 20.

Rushville is now 14-6 on the year and 4-3 in the league, while the losing Indians stand 5-4 in Spoon River play.

Free Throws Aid 56-47 Bluffs Win

BLUFFS — Taking advantage of free throw opportunities, the Bluffs Bluejays were able to down the Meredosia five here Friday night by a 56-47 margin. The PMSC conference tilt saw Bluffs hit on 16 of 26 from the line while the Indians could only manage five of 13.

The contest was a see-saw battle all the way until the Bluejays broke away in the fourth quarter to a nine point bulge on two quick buckets by Bluffs' Wendy Sapp. The local five sank nine charity tosses in the frame to ice the victory. Alan Merriman paced the Bluejay attack with 20 points followed by Sapp with 13. Tom Grisham played an excellent game in a losing effort, hauling down 14 rebounds and tallying 19.

Bluffs now posts a 5-12 season mark.

Ashland Nips Tigers Near End, 79-75

ASHLAND — A strong third quarter by the Ashland Panthers provided the difference as they eked out a 79-75 victory over the ISD Tigers in a thrilling ball game here Friday night.

Ashland opened up a first quarter lead only to have it taken away in the second frame, as the Tigers led 40-36 at the halftime intermission. The Panthers came storming back in the second half and tied the contest at 42-42 after four minutes of play.

Building up another lead, Ashland again fell prey to the ISD for a second time at 49-49.

Blazing 1st Half Allows 16th Win

By BUFORD GREEN

A fast-paced first half proved to be the difference Friday night as Jacksonville convincingly avenged an earlier defeat by handing the Decatur MacArthur Generals a sound 67-47 Capitol Conference whipping before a good crowd at the JHS Bowl.

A 25-point first period and 19 more in the second eight minutes all but wiped out any hopes the Generals had of repeating the surprising upset.

JHS's full-court press plus some hot outside-shooting accounted for a good lead in the first period, and from there the Crimsons continued to pull away until the second team finished up in the final stanza.

A blazing 61% shooting percentage paved the way for the Crimsons to build the spacious first-half margin, but their shooting fell off considerably in the colder second half. The Jacks hit only six of 27 attempts in the second half, after canning 17 of 28 attempts in the first half.

Bone Shined Out
Steve Bone shined in the early going, with nine the first quarter and 12 for the half, ending the game with a high-total of 16. Jacksonville came out hot, but so did the Generals after they got moving. Despite an early 7-0 lead before MacArthur got a shot off, the Generals came roaring back into contention with some unbelievable outside gunning.

The Generals, after finally solving the JHS full-court press, hit their first four shots, all from the deep corner, and got within six on three occasions.

For the period MacArthur hit eight off 11 attempts to the Crimsons' ten of 16 attempts from the field.

A 19-6 difference in the second round settled the issue, as MacArthur fell cold, bothered by the tight man-to-man JHS defense, and hit only two of nine attempts.

Wolves Keep 1st Place In League In 69-60 Margin

PIASA — In a close contest here Friday night, the Pleasant Hill Wolves edged out the Southwestern Birds to capture a 69-60 Illinois Valley Conference triumph and maintain their first place status in the loop. Both teams hit 41% in a game which saw Pleasant Hill gain the advantage on rebounding. The Wolves hauled down 30 compared to 19 for the home team.

The contest was even throughout the first half with the biggest lead being the three point margin that Pleasant Hill held at halftime.

The Wolves increased their lead after intermission mainly on the shooting of Terry Johnson who scored 13 of his 22 points during the half. Johnson was the games' high scorer.

Southwestern pressed in the fourth quarter, but to no avail as the Pleasant Hill squad ran up a 13 point lead with 3:30 to go in the contest and cleared the bench.

Taking the win, the Wolves now stand 4-0 in conference play and 16-3 for the season. The loss dropped Southwestern to a 1-3 loop mark.

Lynn Manis recorded all of his nine points in the first quarter, putting the Hornets ahead to stay. The Liberty squad was extremely cold during the quarter and hit on only two of nine shots. The visitors later found the range but only recorded 34% from the field while the Hornets managed 51%.

The last three frames saw little change in the lead as both teams scored with consistency. Brown County placed three men in double figures, led by Tom Pool who milled in 13 rebounds and scored 15. Bill Gramke captured game scoring honors with 17.

Holding the ball for only good shots, the Cavaliers managed a 10-7 first-quarter reading in their favor. By halftime Gillespie grabbed the lead back by one point.

Carlinville's Greg Weller's bucket sent the game into overtime the first time with a late round bucket.

Carlinville is now 5-3 in the South Central conference, and 9-8 overall.

From there it was easy for the Crimsons, as they amassed several 24-point leads and a 26-point difference at one point. Decatur got within 15 once in the fourth period against the second-outfit.

Bone started off the game with a quick three-point move, as MacArthur fell cold and JHS ripped off nine of 11 points in one stretch. In that string Bone added another three-point, and Sergeant, Wegehoff and Ron Coleman threw in outside shots for a increasing 34-20 spread.

The Jacks tossed in the final ten points of the half, four by Sergeant and two by Larry Welch for a safe 44-23 halftime bulge.

The lead continued to mount in a slower-paced third round, as both clubs fell colder from out. Buckets by Coleman and Whitaker early in the round, four straight charity tosses by Bone and a 20-footer by Don Hess increased the difference to 26 points, 54-28, with 2:16 left in the period. The Crimsons held to a safe 54-30 bulge at the end of the frame.

MacArthur managed to cut the lead to 15 points twice in the final eight minutes, by scoring 11 of the first 13 points, but Welch, scoring his best of the season, began hitting and along with reserves Steve Tavendar and Jim Mann ran the difference back up to 20 points at the close.

Bone's 16 was high for both clubs, while Sergeant hit double figures for JHS and Mike Bader for MacArthur. Whitaker was held to under 20 points for only the second time in the last 11 outings.

The win moved JHS's marks up to an impressive 16-2 on the year, 4-2 in the conference, and dropped Decatur to 10-9.
